

To be read to the young person by the YIT Worker / Referral Source

- There is a new research project looking at housing and the life experiences of young people who were involved in the child welfare system and are now transitioning out of it.
- This will provide you with 2 unique opportunities. First, you will be able to have your voice heard in a nonjudgmental environment. Second, the feedback you provide may improve services for youth leaving care in the future. It is hoped that with your help, the project will be able to provide the government and other decision makers with evidence about what services work best for young people like you.
- In addition, if you are eligible and willing to participate in the study, you could receive a housing subsidy and supports which would be provided until March 2019, and most likely, for the remainder of the two years you participate in the study. However, there is also a chance that you may not receive the subsidy or supports even if you agree to participate in the study.
- In either situation, researchers will want to interview you about your experiences with housing, use of services, community integration, and your health. Some interviews will be very short (about 10 minutes) and others will take about an hour and a half. Everyone who participates in the study will be paid a cash honorarium for each interview and reimbursed for their transportation.
- Does this sound like something you're interested in participating in or learning more about?